ISRHE'S Vision

India's rapid digital expansion has transformed communication and access to services, bringing more than 700 million citizens online. Yet, this progress remains uneven, as substantial disparities persist in internet availability, device access, and digital usage between urban and rural regions, as well as among different socio-economic groups.

Digital & Divide

Urban areas benefit from strong internet infrastructure, high-speed connectivity, and advanced digital tools, enabling wider access to education, healthcare, financial services, and participation in the digital economy, while many rural regions continue to struggle with limited connectivity, weak infrastructure, and affordability challenges. Bridging this digital divide is crucial to reducing inequality, preventing social exclusion, and ensuring that the benefits of technological progress reach every community, fostering inclusive growth, social empowerment, and a truly connected Bharat.

Cybersecurity in India

The COVID-19 pandemic exposed the deep digital divide in India, particularly affecting rural and underserved regions where access to reliable internet and digital devices remains limited. Students faced significant challenges in continuing their education through online platforms, while small businesses suffered financial losses due to digital inaccessibility.

As India rapidly advances toward greater digital integration, cybersecurity threats such as data breaches, ransomware, and phishing attacks have also increased, posing serious risks to individuals, enterprises, and national security.
